

EMOTIONAL LITERACY

A forgotten intelligence?

Read our latest opinion piece from Emotional Literacy specialist, Richard Evans.

If you work in the public sector, you will tend to have opinions: about what works, what doesn't work; who takes the credit, who takes the blame; where the money should come from, how it should be spent.

It would appear there are no concrete answers to these questions, which is why we defer to opinions (informed by our experience, research and intelligence) and act on those instead.

I've worked in and with schools for a number of years now, and I also have some of these opinions. About education. One big one, in fact. Well, it's a question really... it's whether we have forgotten a key intelligence: our skills of understanding ourselves.

Or emotional literacy, if you will...

Interested in learning more? Join us in October for this in-person session: Emotional Literacy – A Passport to Increased Confidence, Engagement and Learning

We are delighted to bring back this training, led by Richard Evans, which has already benefitted many VNET schools! In this session, you will:

- Explore the importance of emotional literacy teaching in education
- Discuss how this key intelligence can be taught to nurture a more grounded, engaged and intrinsically motivated child
- Share his collaborative 'passport' template with ways to teach it – drawing on examples of how it has successfully impacted pupils to date
- Give time and support for staff to consider how they could implement the passport in their setting.

In person: Tuesday 3 October 2023
9:30am – 12:30pm
£135+VAT or 3 credits
Please note: spaces are limited
